

Katharine Boynton, 91

Katharine (Salt) Boynton, 91, passed away on Tuesday, Oct. 17, at her home, surrounded by her family. She was born in Brookline on March 24, 1926, the daughter of Lloyd B. and Katharine (Wing) Salt.

Kay attended The Winsor School in Boston and Beaver Country Day School in Brookline. After working at Harvard Medical School, she married Freeman Boynton. They settled in Duxbury, where they raised their family and lived for almost 50 years. Subsequently, they moved to New London, N.H., where they spent the rest of their lives.

Kay was predeceased by her husband, Freeman Boynton, who passed away in 1994. She was also predeceased by her longtime friend, Winslow Hallowell, her brother Lloyd T. Salt, and her sister Barbara Lockhart.

Kay was an avid quilter and was a proud member of the Soo-Nipi Quilters' Guild. Her other passions included hooking rugs, folk art painting and being with her family. She also had a passion for giving; supporting health organizations, shelters and those less fortunate.

She is survived by members of her family, including her five children: Katharine Williams of Bristol, R.I., Marian Woodward of South Carver, Anne Hilton of Newbury, N.H., Freeman Boynton, Jr. of Duxbury and William Boynton of Hingham, 13 grandchildren, 12 great grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

A memorial service will be held on Dec. 2 at 2:30 p.m. at The First Baptist Church, 461 Main St., New London, N.H. A private burial service will be held in West Part Cemetery, New London, N.H.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that donations be made to Children's Hospital at Dartmouth Hitchcock in Lebanon, N.H., the Upper Valley Humane Society in Enfield, N.H., or HomeStart, Inc. of Boston.
